Not illustrated. 1915 Excerpt: . . . mans-size axe and that it is really sharp, and that there is a file in camp to keep it sharp. It is very well that there should be in the party one or two additional axes, hand axes of at least a pound weight. The dinky sort that go in your pocket ought to be left at home with that patent tent in the front yard for the children. You can get a good, practical little hand-axe with a knob on the handle, a claw to pull nails, and some real steel in the blade. This will be a little heavy to carry on your belt unless you are out for a hunt by yourself--and may get caught out over night. It will, however, go well on your saddle horn. Keep your own axe to yourself in your own tent, and dont lend it, nor let...
