Excerpt: . . . 231 CHAPTER XIII. JUST JOINED. We are but warriors for a working day. Shakespeare. In times of peace the lives of young cavalry officers do not differ much from one another. A little duty, which our colonels expect to have well done; a good mess; a general welcome in the county, which is of course due to their moral and intellectual superiority over any other branch of the service; an unquestioned right to a moustache, which of late years has been shared with Government clerks, ambitious curates, all the Infantry, and most of the Volunteers, make life pleasant as well as ornamental. The dress is becoming, and particularly useful in a ball-room, where it is calculated to keep off intruders in a crowd, and to make great employment for the underpaid and overworked milliners girls--a debt to that class of the fair sex which...
